Senior History

MEN

N EARLY four years ago a new star was discovered in the heavens by astronomers, in the vicinity of Waterville. Even at the time of discovery, the star attracted considerable attention because of its great brilliancy, which has continued to increase in such a remarkable manner that now it is the one bright star of the firmament. The composition of this particular body has since been made known to the world. It is the class of 1903. The characteristics of our class are so numerous that only a few need be mentioned to prove the class an equal, if not the superior, of the many excellent ones which have preceded us.

In our first fall term we showed that we had men who could uphold the honor of the college on the gridiron. In baseball, as well, we have shown our abilities. In basketball we have furnished both manager and captain for two years. On the track, too, we have displayed almost all the interest that has been shown. Here William, alias "Billy," has performed some remarkable feats. The class has reason to be proud of its record in athletics, but more reason to be proud of its record in scholarship. A high mark has been attained by the class as a whole, with many especially bright men who have shown great genius in several different directions. Poets we have in abundance. Orators, more than can find occasion to display their eloquence. Our "Dooley" should not be without mention, nor his roommate who made such an excellent assistant to Prex in Psychology. The Dramatic Club has felt a powerful inspiration in our Lord, and in the "Happy" management of Mr. Steward. In our junior year the musical organizations would have felt the lack of something if our class had not come to their relief and given to them that harmony, which we seemed to have no use for.

Thus in all the lines of college activity we have proven ourselves to be men in whom the reputation of Colby has been safely entrusted, and in the future we shall spread abroad such an influence that our beloved institution will rejoice forever in the discovery of that star now called the "class of 1903." May she prove herself "Colby's Lucky Star."

Senior History

WOMEN

THE curtain is raised for the last act. We see before us a familiar group of players, the girls of 1903. Each face is familiar: the tall and stately Alice, Queen Esther, Queen Bess, and all the other stars of lesser magnitude; but where are the rest of the players who came to the Colby stage four years ago? One by one they have left the stage. One has married, some are teaching, some have gone to other colleges, until of the twenty-nine who began the drama in the fall of '99 but fourteen remain.

Of those fourteen the career has been varied, and, to themselves at least, interesting. German, Physics, Chemistry, have been encountered and conquered. Psychology and Ethics, with all their delightfully expected and unexpected "cuts", have made the senior year "a joy forever." Many a good time, too, sometimes before the public, sometimes behind the scenes, has helped to hasten four years, so long to look forward to, so short when viewed from the end. How well these girls remember that first Y. M. C. A. reception, when they appeared in Memorial Hall in all their newly acquired dignity as college Freshmen! The peanut drunk, too, and the exit that last Friday night in June! The Sophomore ride on that moonlight night in November is still fresh in each girl's mind. The third year, when they expected to find so much "Junior Ease" and found instead much "Junior Plugging", has also passed, and now the fourth year is at its close. The work in college is over; the caps and gowns are donned for the last time; and the girls of 1903 are alumnae.

The curtain falls. The drama is ended. From the applause which rises the players know they have done their work well. They have at last come to the place where they pass out to the larger stage of life to continue, as they have begun, doing their best.

Junior History

MEN

EACH year it becomes the duty of someone to relate the history of his class, setting forth in glowing terms its brave exploits and happy experiences, and concealing as best he may its defeats and shortcomings. Hitherto historians have had the privilege of indulging in a pipe-dream to arouse their muses, but, alas! 'tis sad but true that tobacco is forever denied the holder of a scholarship. Therefore the history of the present Junior Class will not be a dream seen through a cloud of smoke, nor will it be a communication from the spirit-world of the past, but a simple statement of the real life of the class since the last historian completed his records.

The history of nineteen hundred and four has been very ably related in the past two years by its former historians. The duty of the present writer is to set forth what has happened since then. Former historians have sounded our praises, but facts, like figures, never speak falsely. Our Freshman exploits have been chronicled, and some of our Sophomore history has been published. But a few things of our Sophomore year are still untold. Near the end of the year we followed the noble lead of the class of 1902 by carrying off the victory in track athletics. But most important of all was the taking away of our Sophomore Declamation—a thing that has happened to no other class in the history of Colby. This was a so-called punishment inflicted upon us for our exploits on the eve of the Freshman Reading, and for the fact that our "War Cry" was deemed worthy of more attention than all the efforts of the Freshmen; therefore Prexy, thinking that we had gained distinction enough already, announced his decision that there should be no Sophomore Dec. The announcement was received by the class with long and hearty applause.

This year, though few in numbers, we have furnished our quota of men for the athletic teams,—one of the strongest men on the football team, and the baseball captain. We have also taken an active part in the other college activities, with six men in the dramatic club, and four in the musical organizations.

And now, as we look ahead and see the new duties that will soon be ours as Seniors, we can say with all truthfulness that we are better and stronger men for the three years spent at Colby. New friendships are being formed continually, but none are stronger than our love for "Old Colby."

Junior History

WOMEN

AT THE present stage of the world's history progress is undoubtedly the chief object of the class of 1904, and, incidentally, of the world at large. The latter, however, does not concern us, nor will it for a year or two to come. The amount of our progress is truly astonishing, not to say alarming, especially in consideration of the difficulties which we have encountered. Obstacles, however, have but added zest to our undertakings.

During the first year "life flowed along like a song" and we enjoyed ourselves, and all things else, but especially ourselves. It was well that we did, for with the next year came new burdens in the shapeless form of a Freshman class. We bore them bravely and patiently through the tribulations of their youth, and taught many valuable lessons free of charge.

The girls of 1904 have always been of a social disposition and lovers of the good things in life. Many are the tales of revelry and rejoicing that might be told by the several generations of mice which have feasted sumptuously upon the crumbs remaining from famous feasts.

It was in our Sophomore year that we, by inspiration and encouragement, aided our noble brethren to gain distinction above all other classes by indefinitely postponing the Sophomore Declamation, which, as perhaps you know, is a thorn in the flesh to those who must speak, and equally as painful to those who must listen. A kind and considerate faculty, at the instigation of the class and in recognition of our unusual merit, saw fit to consider us deserving of exemption from the customary bore of a declamation, thus securing our undying gratitude, and affording us enduring fame as the class that scorned to be chained to the routine of a humdrum existence.

Ironical "Junior Ease" next descended upon us with its days of ceaseless drudgery and its sleepless nights of toil. We have become to all appearances as sedate, dignified, and upright as the most critical could desire; but there yet lives within us, ever urging to new conquests, the spirit which has made us "first in peace and first in war."

It is necessary to confess that we have progressed in more ways than one, and also in more directions than one. Arithmetical progression has worked sad havoc with our numbers. Thirty-five, twenty-four, thirteen, tells the story of our losses, but we hope the lucky thirteen has broken the spell. It is sometimes for the best that progress, even, should be arrested. Then let Sam look for our return when Colby's doors again swing wide. We will come, ready as of yore to do our share of the work, bear our share of the blame, and humbly receive our share of the glory.

Sophomore History

MEN

IN the beginning of the reign of Charles the White, there came onto the campus of Colby, in the land of Waterville by the Kennebec valley, a new people, a wonderful people, a people who were destined to revolutionize the government of this campus. You ask, "Who was this people?" "What have they done?" Lo, do you not know? This was the glorious class of nineteen hundred five. Their deeds have been many, and they have accomplished much. Some of them, it is true, have married and settled down; but the most of this valiant band of warriors are still unscathed by the co-ords and are sighing for more worlds to conquer. This mighty army overcame all in its path during the first year of its stay in the new land. Even "Jude," the sturdy old Roman, fell before the headlong rush of their "hosses" feet. "Stet," the high Greek, said that the hoss was a thing of the past, and that there was no more of him in the land of Colby. Straightway one of the indomitable offered all his "kingdom for a hoss," but it was all for naught, (i. e., the hoss was not); so in six minutes he created one, and when he had looked upon it and saw that it was good he bred many more of it, and "Stet" was much pleased and grew exceeding glad over the great success of this new beast. So things flowed always smoothly and ever onward for this new people until the time came for them to celebrate the end of their first year's stay in the land of Colby. Then they hied them one and all up country to the little hamlet of Pittsfield where they ate, drank, and made much merry. When they had gotten their fill, they sang "Phi Chi" until the cocks crew and the Pullman stopped to bring them back, a band of broken down sports, to the land of Colby.

This is the second year of their sojourn and things are still coming their way. "Rob", the fierce and haughty, is slowly but surely succumbing under the fearful fire of their article (ary). They surpass even the faculty in the volume of noise at chapel, and in the number of cuts. Their strenuosity of life has driven "Cosine" the venerable to the wall, and "Doc" Frew to other lands. The Dutchman has said that they "haff pegun to get their Deutsch irregulars." Little Johnny Hedman has missed the point with them and given them two rules each, without exceptions.

Young Beck, the handsome, crept into his castle and barred its massive doors, thinking he was safe within his invulnerable walls, when lo, six worthy sons of Phi Chi came in and laid him flat. Before the great conflagration of the North Dormitory in the small hours of the morning, they drove many another tribe back from their lairs, and now they reign supreme (in their own minds) in South College and the Hersey Honse, the friends of all, save the too fresh.

Sophomore History

WOMEN

The summer days were passing fast,
As to old Colby came a class
Of girls, who bore, 'gainst Sophs' advice,
A banner with that grand device,
For 1905 !

Their looks were meek (?) when boldly, 'neath
The dreaded Sophomore, 'gainst her leave,
At the peanut drunk, they danced and sung,
And shouted with their loudest tongue,
Oh ! 1905 !

A year went by, so short and bright,
The timid Freshmen saw Sophomore light.
Now they in turn their power have shown.
Still on the breezes their banner has flown,
Up, 1905 !

The sturdy Sophomore knows no rest,
Yet courage burns within her breast.
With many a lesson before her eye,
Still she shouts, with never a sigh,
Rah ! 1905 !

Ever to Colby the blue and the gray
We'll loyal be, though grave or gay.
Should we be scattered near or far,
There'll shine on our lives like a burning star,
On, 1905 !

Freshman History

MEN

STRANGER, to Sam,—What are Colby's colors, 'Fessor?

Sam,—Well, sah, dey allers has been blue and gray, but dis year dey's mos'ly green.

Well said, thou good and faithful servant; many years have you labored here and many freshmen seen, and we can easily believe you when you say that our class of nineteen sicks is the most verdant conglomeration of jackasses and cow punchers that ever left their vulgar hoof-prints on the lovely campus of old Colby.

All that this wonderful (?) class has done since it first profaned the halls of Colby is briefly told in the following epistle:—

COLBY COLLEGE,

— —, 1903.

DEAR PAPA:—

I'm just goin' to tell you what all we new boys have done since we came to Colby. There was a lot more of us the first morning we went to the chapel than there was of the sophomores, but they was so big and bloody looking that we was all of us skairt half to death of 'em. Then they challenged us to play a game of base ball with them and they told us not to blow any horns. We didn't know what to do, but the juniors (I don't know whether these are freshmen or three year men, but I guess they are freshmen; they act so much like us.) told us they'd be there to help us; so with a little help and a good deal of cheering from us the juniors came out ahead in the horn rush; but we cheated so much in the base ball game I guess I won't say anything about it.

Those howwid sophomores I've been telling you about come around almost every night and "haze" us, they call it, but it feels to us more like spanking. When they came to my room I didn't know very well how to entertain 'em, but I did the best I could. I got up on the table and showed 'em how I made love to Jemimy the night before I came away from home. I played that little doll you and mama gave me last Christmas was Jemimy and I hugged and kissed it just as if it was her.

When the girls of our class gave we boys a reception two of them awful sophomores took our president and kept him until he was ready to go to bed and brought him down to the hall where we was trying to eat ice cream (?) in the dark and left him with us with nothing on but his nightie.

Good-bye with love to you, mamma and Jemimy I am your good little boy.

Virgy Jones.

Freshman History

When Mother Colby threw open her doors to welcome the flock of returning students, many new ones, known as Freshmen, were seen among this number. They could be distinguished easily from the other students by their looks of curiosity for the new wonders which they were seeing mingled with sorrow for the homes left behind. They are an unusual class in only one respect. They have an extraordinary amount of freshness and greenness which is slowly wearing away under careful Sophomoric treatment.

Informed by their ever-watchful Sophomore friends that the Peanut drunk was always celebrated on Bloody Monday night, they made great plans for the event, both as to when they should go and how to obtain the peanuts without arousing the suspicions of the Sophomores. How surprised they must have been when that bushel of delicious hot peanuts failed to appear, and how much more surprised they would have been if they could have seen those Sophomore girls enjoying their second Peanut drunk.

Another important event was the Hallowe'en party given to them by the Sophomores. When the invitations were received the poor girls were so overcome by fright that they did not know what to do, but after many secret meetings they decided to assemble in one room and compel the Sophomores to allow them to go in a body and without blindfolds. Of course such violations of well established customs could not be allowed, so these ideas were soon dispelled and all of the usual and some unusual rites were performed.

As all of these girls were very anxious to meet their brothers, they invited the men of 1906 to a party. When the longed-for day came the maidens spent hours preparing costumes for the event, for each maiden wished to look her prettiest. But this was only wasted time, for the electric lights, with wires cut by Sophomores, would not shine upon this array of finery, and only kerosene lamps could be obtained for the occasion, so many a pretty costume passed unnoticed in some shady corner.

Their mistakes have been many but we hope that this Freshman class will improve so they will be fitted to take up the burdens of Sophomores, when the present class must lay them down to assume greater responsibilities.

CLASS ODE

Let us sing in joyful chorus
As we gather here to-day,
Summer skies bend brightly o'er us,
All our hearts are light and gay.
Care and work we'll now forget,
With no thought of vain regret,
We will now our tribute pay
As we praise the blue and gray.

CHORUS.

So now to Colby let us sing
With spirits gay and free.
May joyful echoes ever ring,
Hurrah for 1903.

We think not of times to come,
Which will end our college days.
The present hour's full of pleasure,
And the future's one bright maze.
Memories always fond and dear,
Ever wait to greet us here ;
Troubles vanish, sorrows flee
From every heart in 1903.

Dear Alma Mater, on the threshold of another year,
'Neath the old walls that we have learned to love so well,
Once more we're gathered 'round thine altar, to revere
Shades of past memories that in thee, old chapel, dwell.
Peals the old organ from it's corner whence of yore
Sounded the strains of many a stirring old refrain.
Yet bright thy smile where gloom and shadow lurked before,
Nineteen Three's magic touch has made thee young again.

One more short year with thee, old Colby, ere we leave thee,
Leave thee forever for a world untried, unknown.
Yet shall our love, as firm and lasting as the stars above,
E'er to these halls in fondest memory return.
Bright are the days that we have spent with thee, old Mater,
Brighter appearing, now their ending is in view.
Take then the offering that we lay upon thine altar,
Take thou our gift, our love, our hearts forever true.

Air: "The Shoogy Shoo."

It is said with sad, sweet sorrow
That we meet to-day,
To sing to thee our parting song,
To Colby blue and gray;
It fills our hearts with memories deep
With cherished hopes and fears,
For Colby, we our hearts will keep
In love through future years.

CHORUS.

Soft and slow,
Sweet and low,
Songs we'll sing to you
Of the dear old college days,
And the gray and blue.
College days are of the past,
And parted lie our ways,
But we will ever loyal be
To Colby 1902.

Oh, all the world is bright and gay,
We've not a grief or care,
We all are happy here to-day,
We know not deep despair.
For we love our Alma Mater,
And we'll strive forever aye,
To honor her and live for her,
Till years have passed away.

Colby dear, Colby dear,
Come we our love to tell;
Colby dear, Colby dear,
Come we to say farewell.

Here where your willows have sheltered us long,
Come we to give you at parting a song,
Come we our love to tell,
Colby, dear Colby, beloved forever, farewell.

Colby dear, Colby dear,
Sing we farewell to you;
Colby dear, Colby dear,
Sing we the gray and blue:
Sing we the memory of days that are past,
Sing we the friendships that ever shall last,
Sing we our love so true,
Colby, Colby, beloved forever, to you.

Josiah Hayden Drummond, LL.D.

ON October 25, 1902, Colby College lost one of her most honored and most devoted sons, for on that day Hon. Josiah Hayden Drummond, Chairman of the Board of Trustees, entered into rest.

Born on August 30, 1827, in the town of Winslow, which lies across the Kennebec River from Waterville and which is in fact the mother town, Mr. Drummond had passed the three-quarter century mark and yet was simply seventy-five years young. He was of Scotch-Irish descent, that hardy race that did so much for the settling of New England, and his early days were passed on a typical Maine farm where life means more of work than of play and from which much of the brain and sinew of our State has been drawn.

Taking his preparatory studies at Vassalboro Academy, he entered Waterville College and graduated in the Class of 1846 at the age of nineteen, winning high rank in mathematics, a branch of study which he kept up during his entire life, finding rest and recreation in a problem of calculus as others in the latest novel of the day.

After graduation he taught school for a time and then began the study of law in the office of Boutelle and Noyes in Waterville, the firm being composed of Timothy Boutelle, a pioneer in Waterville, one of the leading attorneys of his day and a trustee of the college from 1821 to 1855; and Edwin Noyes, a lawyer of fine ability and strong character. Mr. Drummond was admitted to the Kennebec Bar at the October Term, 1850, and after a business trip to California, where he also was admitted to the bar, returned to Waterville and entered upon the practice of his profession. Soon the premonitions of the forthcoming Civil War appeared and the slavery question came to the front. Mr. Drummond, though born and bred a Democrat, cast his lot with the newly formed Republican party and ever after was one of its ablest and most influential members. He entered with all the earnestness and enthusiasm of his nature into those great public questions that were then arousing the conscience of the people and took an active part in practical politics. The campaign of 1856, when Hannibal Hamlin, who had represented the Democracy in the United States Senate for nine years, was the Republican candidate for Governor, and Samuel Wells was the Democratic, was one of the most exciting in the history of the State. The feeling was intense and we, who have known Mr. Drummond in the calm sunset of his life, can hardly picture the young lawyer of twenty-nine in the midst of that fierce battle. His own words have drawn the portrait :

"I learned that the Pierce postmasters were preventing Republican newspapers from being circulated. I left my law office, hired a cart, filled it with bundles of Republican newspapers and started off at a gallop for the neighboring country towns. When I reached a town I would pull off my coat and shout to the crowd, 'Do you want any Republican newspapers?' How they would shout—'Yes! Yes! Yes!' and flock around the cart! Then I would ask them if they wanted a speech. The Saturday before the election I drove sixty miles and spoke, in all, six hours. But the excitement buoyed me up. The very air seemed like champagne. There never was a campaign like it in the country."

The Republican victory was most decisive and for several years Mr. Drummond was a conspicuous figure in the political arena. He was representative to the Legislature from Waterville in 1857 and 1858, the latter year serving as Speaker, though only thirty-one years of age. In 1859, he was elected State Senator but resigned his office to accept the position of Attorney-General, to which he was elected by the Legislature of which he was a member, a compliment rarely bestowed. He was re-elected Attorney-General in 1861, 1862 and 1863 and then declined a further re-election.

In 1860, Mr. Drummond moved to Portland to enter upon the practice of his profession in a broader field and was sent to the Legislature from that city in 1869 and again served as Speaker. After that date he declined to be a candidate for public office although his name was frequently mentioned in that connection. His record in the political field was clean and able and had he desired, it is probable that higher political honors would have been his.

For over fifty years he was a distinguished member of the bar in active practice. He early became associated with the railroads of Maine and was for many years prior to his death general counsel of the Maine Central Railroad Co., with whose history and growth no one was more familiar than he. He was also general counsel for the Union Mutual Life Insurance Co. and other large corporations and his practice was both extensive and lucrative. As a lawyer his position was an enviable one and his success notable. He was at one time tendered a position on the Supreme Bench of Maine, an honor which he felt compelled to decline.

In the field of Masonry Mr. Drummond stood supreme. He believed in it and loved it. He joined the Waterville Lodge in 1849 and from that time to the day of his death, the ancient craft drew from him much of his time and attention. He held the highest positions in the order both in the State and the Nation, being elected in 1867 Grand Commander of the United Supreme Council, the highest office in the gift of the fraternity. He was the recognized authority in Masonic jurisprudence.

Mr. Drummond's fondness for the friendships and associations of a fraternal organization showed itself early in life. When in college he was instrumental in securing a charter for Xi Chapter of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity, being one of the charter members at its organization in 1845 and, ever after, that society was very close to his heart. It mattered not how busy had been his days, he was always to be found at the reunion in the evening, missing but one in all the fifty-six years that elapsed after his graduation. At the semi-centennial anniversary of the fraternity held during the commencement of 1895, he who had aided in its inception presided when the 50th milestone was reached. He loved to call its members from the freshman to the gray haired alumnus his "boys" and they loved to call him "Father Drummond." At the last reunion, held in 1902, he was presented with a beautiful loving cup "from the boys," a gift which he said was to him the dearest of his life. His speech of acceptance, in which he touched upon friends and friendship, will not soon be forgotten. It struck the key note of his whole life and revealed its governing purpose. Position, honors and wealth were as nothing to him compared with the love of loyal friends. Fortunately he had such friends in countless numbers and it is not the extravagance of eulogy to say that no man in this State was more widely known or more dearly loved than he. He received much because he gave much. His devotion to his Alma Mater and her interests never faltered. In dark days and in bright, he was ready to speak or to work or to do for the little college on the Kennebec. In 1857, while still a resident of Waterville, he was elected a member of the Board of Trustees and served continuously until his death, being Chairman of the Board since 1890, his term of service being longer than that of any other living member with the exception of Hon. Moses Giddings, who has served since 1852. His place in the board cannot easily be filled. Familiar with the history of the college, keeping in touch with it from the very day of his entrance as a freshman, his experience and advice were invaluable. Many of the readers of this article will remember what was in fact his valedictory at the last commencement dinner, when his voice rang clear and full in old Memorial Hall as he spoke of Colby and for her, of what she had done and of what still remained for her to do. She was to him a fond mother, and no mother ever had a more filial son. In 1871 she conferred upon him the degree of L.L. D., but both the college and her graduates continued to confer on him their thanks and their blessings for his work in her behalf.

In his home life Mr. Drummond was singularly fortunate and there were passed his happiest hours. Married on December 10, 1850, to Miss Elzada Rollins Bean of New York City, but a native of Maine, for over half a century their married life remained unbroken. Four children were born to them, of whom three are living, the son, Josiah Hayden Drummond, Jr., being a graduate of Colby in the Class of 1877 and his partner in business for over twenty years.

Mr. Drummond died as he doubtless would have wished, with the harness on and in the midst of affairs. No lingering illness, no enfeebled powers, but simply a moment of unconsciousness and then an awakening in another land, but God's land still. In Evergreen Cemetery, in the city of his adoption, the members of the Masonic fraternity have erected an imposing monument to the memory of their distinguished leader and there it will stand to commemorate one whose intellect was great but whose heart was greater; one whose life was filled with service for others and who achieved in a marked degree that immortality which George Eliot prayed might be hers:

"Of those immortal dead who live again
In lives made better by their presence."

LESLIE C. CORNISH.

Grace Ella Berry

THIS year Colby has welcomed to her midst a new Dean of the Women's Division, Miss Grace Ella Berry, M.A., who comes to us from Mt. Holyoke College.

Miss Berry was born in Worcester, Mass., December 23, 1870. Her early education was received in the West Boylston (Mass.) public schools. After graduating from the high school of that town she entered Mt. Holyoke College, from which she graduated in '93.

Since that time Miss Berry has been continually engaged in college work and thus brings a rich experience to Colby. In the fall of '93 she accepted a position to teach Mathematics and Physics at The Western College for Women at Oxford, Ohio. After four years she returned to Holyoke to teach the same branches. In '99 her Alma Mater conferred upon her the degree of Master of Arts. In order to better prepare herself to accept the professorship of Physics offered her at Holyoke, Miss Berry spent the summer of 1900 in graduate work at Cornell University, assuming the professorship the following autumn.

Since coming to Colby she has shown the same energetic spirit and devotion to her work which has characterized her in her former positions, and which, combined with her undoubted ability, has been the cause of her great success.

Clarence Hayward White

CLARENCE HAYWARD WHITE, A. M., came to the College last fall as the successor of Professor C. B. Stetson in the department of Greek language and literature. It can truly be said that during the year he has gained the respect and affection of all the students with whom he has been associated and has proved himself at every point a master of his subject.

Professor White was born in the town of Raynham, Mass., in 1863. He prepared for college at Bristol Academy, Taunton, Mass., entering Amherst in 1882. His college career was indicative of unusual ability, for his record was a brilliant one, Mathematics, Greek and Philosophy being especially congenial to him.

During his college course he was a member of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity. He was elected to Phi Beta Kappa by the first drawing, and during his senior year was vice-president of the Amherst Chapter. Many college honors were bestowed upon him in recognition of his powers. He was a member of the original "Amherst Senate," one of the "Hardy Eight" chosen for excellence in extempore debate, and he represented his class on the Commencement stage, taking the "Bond Prize" for the best oration there delivered. To crown all he graduated at the head of his class of seventy-seven members, receiving his diploma "Summa cum laude."

His experience as a teacher had an early beginning, as he was instructor in Amherst High school during his senior year in college. The year after his graduation he taught Latin and Mathematics at Hartford, Conn. He then became instructor in Greek and Latin at Carlton College, Northfield, Minnesota, where he remained until 1891, when he was appointed instructor in Latin at Worcester. He was made Master of Latin in 1893 and was senior member of the faculty at the time when he was elected Professor of Greek at Colby.

Professor White has been especially successful in the introduction of modern methods in teaching his subject. He has not only shown a thorough knowledge of the language, but has furthermore been able to arouse in his students an interest in their work and a true appreciation of the masterpieces of Greek literature.

Leslie Rogers Moore

LESLIE ROGERS MOORE, B.S., who came to the College last fall as instructor in Chemistry and Zoology, was born in South Sudbury, Mass., in 1877. His early education was received in the public schools of Newton, Mass. After being graduated from the high school of that place he entered the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in the class of 1894. While there he took the Chemical Course and after his graduation he was retained for a year as assistant instructor in Technical Chemistry. Later he went abroad and studied for over three years, chiefly at Heidelberg, Germany. Mr. Moore devoted most of his study to the Sciences, especially Chemistry, together with Geology, Mineralogy and Physics.

Mr. Moore came to the College, first of all, as instructor of Chemistry, but has also had classes in Zoology, Botany, and one in English. He has shown himself to be an excellent instructor in all of these subjects, but more especially in Chemistry. The Chemistry course in the College is more extensive this year than ever before and now covers all the ground covered by the undergraduate course in any college. In addition to the scheduled laboratory hours, Mr. Moore has been willing to spend all the additional time desired by the students for chemical work.

The Burning of North College

UP to last winter Colby had been unusually fortunate in her immunity from disasters of every kind. To be sure, there was a slight fire in South College last spring which caused more excitement than damage; but, aside from a few scares like this, nothing had happened to seriously disturb the regular routine.

On the night of December 5th, however, occurred the burning of Chaplin Hall, a calamity which will live long in the memory of everyone connected with the College.

Chaplin Hall, popularly known as North College, was built eighty years ago, in 1822, the year of the first Commencement and of the coming of President Chaplin. At the time of the fire the building was occupied by about forty students, a larger number than usual.

A little before three o'clock Saturday morning, December 6th, Gooch '06, who occupied the front body room on the ground floor of the North Division was awakened either by the smoke or by the crackling of the flames. The fire had already gained considerable headway and the lower part of the building was filled with dense smoke. Gooch gave the alarm which was taken up by several others who were now awake. Hersey Keene, last year's football captain, ran to the nearest box and rang in the alarm. By this time everyone was awake and the fire-escapes were crowded with students, most of whom were in rather picturesque attire. The fire originated in the basement of the North Division and is supposed to have been caused by a defective chimney. It spread rapidly upward between the partitions and at the same time communicated itself to the South Division. It seems truly miraculous that no one was injured, for the fire escapes were all on the rear of the building, so that those in the front rooms had to run the gauntlet of smoke and flame before reaching them. Most of the students barely escaped with their lives; many were unable to save even their watches and money; some were more fortunate, but even these could rescue only a few things. Some of the students were sick with the mumps, and these, as well as the others, were obliged to run to South College, some barefooted, through a foot of snow and with the mercury below zero. College students are proverbially tough, however, and no harm resulted from it.

The fire department arrived in good time, but there was some delay in getting the necessary pressure, due to anchor ice in the Messalonskee, and it soon appeared that their efforts were in vain, and at daybreak only the walls were left standing; all else was a smouldering mass of ruins.

Aroused from sound sleep into the midst of such confusion it is no wonder that some failed to preserve their coolness and there were several ludicrous scenes. One worthy Senior, whose name it would not be safe to mention, rushed into a fellow-student's room with a large bundle of clothes in his arms, and then setting the clothes down in a corner, he carefully threw himself out of the window. Fortunately, it was only the second story, so that no serious damage was done; but he lost the clothes.

Another student, this time a Freshman, was found later in the morning, bewailing the loss of his trunk. He was sure that it must have been stolen, for he distinctly remembered carrying it out of the building. Upon investigation, however, it was found near the railroad tracks almost an eighth of a mile from the building, where he had carried it himself.

Immediate steps were taken for the housing and comfort of the sufferers and the students of Colby College owe a never-ending debt of gratitude to the good people of Waterville, who so hospitably opened their houses to them; to the Waterville Board of Trade, through whose untiring energy clothes, books, and other necessities were furnished; to the sister colleges Maine and Bowdoin, who so generously contributed to their relief; and to all others who by subscription and other means, helped them to recover from this disaster.

It speaks well for the indomitable pluck of the students, that, although many who were working their way through college lost everything that they possessed, not one gave up his College course.

Today North College stands in ruins, but soon, thanks to the generosity of friends and of the State, she will rise Phoenix-like from the ashes in a more beautiful and, we hope, even more durable form; so that the fire, instead of being the curse we feared, may almost seem to have been a blessing.

Memorabil

Oh, Memorabil! my Memorabil!
Thy sight doth my inmost bosom thrill!
I would I could thy pages fill
With gingerbread man and chocolate pill,
Warranted sure all pain to kill!
With telegram signed, "Your loving Will."
"Coming to-night to Waterville,"
With up-stream relics, dearer still
Than all the rest, dear Memorabil.
With sketches drawn by artist's skill,
And on one page a 'normous bill,
Fresh from that horrid dentist's quill—
Thy sight doth me with rapture fill,
Without thee life would be utterly nil,
Oh, Memorabil! dear Memorabil!

A Cure for Absent-mindedness

“IT’S no use,” Ruth was saying to herself, “he’s just too horridly absent-minded for anything,” when a well directed sofa pillow from the couch in the corner, turned her attention to the other occupant of the room, a merry-faced, fair-haired girl who rose to a sitting position and demanded: “Well, what’s he gone and did now?”

“The horrid thing—you can’t imagine. Why, it’s just two days now before the Junior Prom and he hasn’t said a word to me about it yet, and of course—”

A series of giggles interrupted the words and the mocking voice chanted,

“There was a young fellow named Ted,
So awfully absent-minded,”

The improviser stopped, however, to sympathize when she saw tears gathering in Ruth’s eyes. “Never mind, Ruthie,” she said, “he’ll probably get round to it after a while, immejiate, if not sooner,” and continued munching fudge.

“O, I don’t care for myself. You see, it’s the principle of the thing,” was the reply, delivered in tones that savored of martyrdom. After a few moments of thought: “I know what I’ll do. I’ve got a scheme in my head, and if Mr. Ted doesn’t reform inside of a week, I miss my guess.”

After some time the following mysterious missives were evolved and read to the audience of one:

“My dear Mr. Stanley:

I accept with pleasure your kind invitation for the Junior Promenade, May 1st, 1903.

Very sincerely,

Alice White.”

“Well,” said Madge, “what on earth—” “Listen, child!”

“My dear Mr. Stanley:

I accept with pleasure your most kind invitation for the Junior Promenade on the evening of May 1st, 1903.

Sincerely,

May Stoneham.”

and—

“My dear Mr. Stanley:

I accept with pleasure your very kind invitation for Junior Prom the evening of May 1st, 1903.

Very sincerely,

Alice Langham.”

“Well, Sphinx, ’splain yourself,” was the demand between lingering bites of fudge.

"Why, goosie, don't you see; I'm going to send these to Ted, and of course he'll think he has asked all these girls in a fit of absent-mindedness, and then it'll teach him a lesson getting out of the scrape."

"What a stupendous brain! Mademoiselle, you are really getting to be quite a Sherlock Holmes. There is a wild gleam in your eye, methinks, like Prof.'s when he says, in lamb-like tones: "Where is that article?" and with an approving pat, Madge was gone.

The door bell rang and a tall young fellow was ushered into the apartment dignified in college halls by the name, reception room.

"Ted, I declare," said Ruth guiltily, as she returned from the mail box where she had deposited the fateful letters. She smoothed her flushed face and entered the reception room with the conscious smile of one who has done a good deed.

"Ruth," he said, "I've come to tell you about the Prom, it's going to be just great; the fellows are working like sixty for it, and the hall looks O. K. You'll go, I s'pose. Let's see, your gown is white, isn't it, and shall I send violets? Eight o'clock then, all right, good-by!" and he was off.

"I declare," said Ruth to her confidant, the chafing-dish, "I do feel horrid to be so mean to Ted, for he is a dear sometimes, but then, you noticed, perhaps, that he said, 'I s'pose you'll go.' Now, how did he know I'd go, and it just serves him right for not asking me before! A boy always thinks you are ready and willing to put on your best gown and go anywhere with 'em anytime. Of course, he will take me anyhow, but won't it be fun to see what he'll do about those notes. And then, he said, 'Your gown is white, isn't it?' as if I'd worn it for an eternity. Just makes me boil!"

That night the last mail brought to the Alpha Zeta fraternity house the three letters, and the puzzled face of the recipient would have quite made the girl content had she seen it.

The afternoon of the Prom was a busy one with flutterings to and fro and wise discussions over "colors" and "lines," and such exclamations as, "Oh, lovely! Just too dear for anything! Elegant! Stunning!"

Five o'clock came and no flowers had arrived, instead a note from Ted, saying, "And it please Your Highness, I will come at six on important business." The 'important' was underlined. Ruth's heart gave a jump, and her tender little conscience, which to tell the truth, had been working over hours the previous night, was more sensitive than before. "O dear, dear," she wailed, "I most know he will bring another man for me and go himself with another girl, just on account of those notes,—and my new dress all done"—and she subsided in half muffled sobs into the big Sleepy Holly chair before the library fire. There Ted found her when he came in unannounced ten minutes later.

Ruth started up at his step, for she had forgotten the call completely, and straightened herself quickly in her chair.

"I—I like to - to sit in the firelight, don't you?" she said hastily. "Don't trouble to turn on the lights."

"Certainly not, if you don't wish it," he said kindly, ceremoniously, she thought, and waited for her to speak.

A moment she sat and then the enormity of it all came over her, not going to the Prom very likely, and anyway, a horrid mix-up just on account of those stupid notes. Of course he had gotten into some sort of scrape answering them, for what else could a mere boy do, and maybe he would have to take that hateful Alice Langham or that abominable White girl. It was too much.

"Oh, Ted," she said, "I didn't mean to be so horrid, and which one is it you've decided on, Alice or May? I—I heard about your trouble."

"Lucky," she said to herself, "I almost told him that I wrote 'em after all."

A suppressed laugh broke the silence that followed. It soon broke all bonds, however, and rang out provokingly loud and clear in the little room.

"Oh, you little goose, Ruth," he managed to say at last, "I'm going to take you, of course, if I may, and I knew all the time you wrote those notes."

"You did! and how, pray?"

"Why, the seal, child, your seal which you stamped on each envelope!"

"Well, what an idiot! Did you ever hear of such a thing? And then you didn't answer them, of course, and, but what did you come for?"

"I? Oh-h, I didn't have any errand—that is very - er - particular. I just thought - er - I'd bring the violets round myself. But what in the world did you—"

"My," said the meek voice, "I wanted to cure you of absent-mindedness!"

A laugh was his reply and then, "I'm ever so sorry, Ted, but don't, please, don't laugh!"

After a moment he regained his breath again to say, "Oh, but I say now who was the absent-minded one? All right, though, I guess I needed it, and, Ruth," now it was his turn to stammer and blush. "Just wear this to-night, will you, to pin on the flowers, will you? I - I - er - had an extra one, and don't bother to give it right back. I - I - er—"

"An Alpha Zeta pin! Why, Ted, I can't, you never dared"—but a scurry of long legs amid a whirl of dust arising from an overturning chair told her that he was gone.

And more provoking still, in the hall, a mocking chorus sang,

"There was a young fellow named Ted,
So exceedingly absent-minded,
A maiden named Ruth—would cure him forsooth,
But did she? 'Nay! Nay!' he said."

Night in the Forest

In the cold starlight, ere the morning broke,
Slept the mute forest, shadowy and chill,
Its branches drooping—as in sorrow bowed,
To meet the earth's broad bosom, white and still.
Within the forest's dusky, snow-wreathed depths,
All sign of life was chilled by frosty blight;
Bared branches and brown skeletons of grass,
Rose eerily against the glistening white.

The sentinels of the wood majestic loomed.
How dark the fir tree in the ashen light!
The pine tree ceased its sigh and seemed to fear
The death-like silence in the stilly night.
The cedar's lace-like tracery stirred not,
Nor moved the spruce-bough, 'neath its shroud of snow;
All calm above,—the heavens gemmed with stars,—
Within the gloom-wrapped forest,—calm below.

Anon a faint wind sighed, and with its breath
I heard the moaning of the distant sea,—
The funeral requiem of the death-touched earth,
It told naught of the new life, yet to be;
Lo! in the East an opalescent gleam,
The forest stirred, the chilly gloom was gone;
The stars now dimmed, sank slowly, one by one;
One touch of rose: behold! the break of dawn.

Abwesend

Some people laugh and sing,
While others cry and weep ;
But on the morning of May eighteenth,
Our Faculty went to sleep.

The bell had ceased to sound,
The Co-ords all were there ;
But on the rostrum not a man
To read or make the prayer.

Hedman alone came near,
And, boys, 'twas simply fun ;
He looked once thro' the chapel door,
Then turned his heels and run.

Run like a fox pursued
On a cold and frosty day.
He said 'twould put him on the bum,
To stand up there and pray.

The Faculty say that Moore
Has but four courses here,
And ought to read the Scripture
When they fail to appear.

But Moore is like a tired horse
Upon a dusty road.
And do you wish to kill the man
By adding to his load ?

No, let us get an extra man,
And hire him by the year ;
Ike Watts is aching for the job
To read and make the prayer.

Things That You Ought to Know

Freshmen :—That chlorine gas will remove green stains.

Faculty :—That Mr. Moore is a chemist, not a jack-at-all-trades.

Black :—That it would be a good plan to wash your dog.

Sophs of 1905 :—That the Sophs' prize money of 1904 was stolen.

K. K. Men :—That you must get a writ of 'habeas corpus' from Dean Berry before sailing up the Messelonskee with a girl.

Hodges :—That a 'boss' is generally a young calf.

Beck :—That when you are sent to visit 'Higgins' it means the school, not the girl.

Rob :—That loud barking in the class room is not appropriate.

Dean Berry :—That one night about ten o'clock, some of the girls at Ladies' Hall observed a Bartlett pair in the parlor.

There was a poor Freshman named Hutchy,
Who wanted—ah, yes, very muchy—
To go on the Phi Delt ride;
So co-ords he asked, six or suchy,
But found every one quite too touchy
To go on the Phi Delt ride.

History of a Senior

T*HIS is a HISTORY of a SENIOR at Colby.*

lives at Cherryfield, which is a very wonderful place and exports many nice people. This will treat of Betsey's lovers. When Betsey came to Waterville, her "feller" was an Alpha Tau Omega man who went to U. of M. She had many "devoteds" at Coburn, among whom was afterwards COLBY, 1903. When she came to college and was a Freshman asked for an

ENGAGEMENT with her. And it is thought she said —yes— and he took a kiss, for CECIL joined Kappa Kappa Kappa. Another "feller" was Nathan P. Thayer, another ROSCOE, and still another Moody. When BETSEY was a Sophomore, a fat man claimed her. He lived in Augusta. Sometimes Lew Clyde Church came to see her, and sometimes H. W. Newenham, sometimes L. G. Saunders, and Cecil Murice Daggett, and sometimes people from Bowdoin. L. C. Church came many times when BETSEY was a Junior.

seemed to find great pleasure in her company, but he has gone to Texas now.

was nice. It was a case of Love at thought "Bets" First Sight.

Hersey called her "la songe" Now Betsey is a SENIOR and  is her man. He is a great FOOTBALL player and she says Frank Horace Leighton is a nice boy. FRANK seems to think she is nice, too. Leighton goes to see Bess Saturday evenings, and Sundays they go to church.

Now here are some of her collection, from Delta Upsilon,
DELTA KAPPA EPSILON, and Zeta Psi, but all are Kappas.

The Quaint, the Queer, and the Quizzical

AT THE Y. M. C. A. RECEPTION

Miss Tolman: "Mr. Kennison, are you taking the deficiency exams?"

Mr. Kennison, (surprised and rather indignant): "Why, no."

Miss T—: "I certainly heard you were."

Those standing near begin to laugh. Then the Senior sees her mistake and stammers, "I beg your pardon. I meant the prize entrance exams." But Mr. Kennison continues to blush.

LOST

Sophomore: "Say, Freshie, have you seen anything of that bundle Prexy has lost?"

Freshman: "No, what kind of a bundle was it?"

Sophomore: "Why, his bundle of life, of course."

AT THE GATE

An important looking gentleman with a round face, a sandy moustache, and a body somewhat anteriorly extended, hurries by the Freshman without showing a ticket. Freshie runs after him and says politely:

"The fare is twenty-five cents, sir?"

"Don't you know who I am?" asks the gentleman, looking down on him with an air of surprise

"No, sir," replies the Freshman.

The gentleman draws himself up and pompously proclaims:

"I'm Dr. Hill."

"Yes, sir," the awe-struck Freshman replies, "I beg your pardon," and he humbly returns to the gate.

APPEARANCES ARE DECEITFUL

Rob: "Mr. Hutchins, you look like an octogenarian."

Hutchins: "Ha-ay? What d'you sa-ay?"

Rob (smiling): "You look like an octogenarian."

Hutchins: "Wa-al, I ain't. I'm a Ba-aptist."

WITH A DIFFERENCE

Miss H - g - ns (Heiress to Papa's Institute): "Don't you think Mr. McCauley has a very cultured look?"

Miss R—tt (lately from Holyoke): "Well . . . yes, Agricultured."

WHOSE MISTAKE

Black: "What is a very important economic utility of a social nature?"

Mildred (promptly): "Male."

Black: "Yes, that's right;" (catching on) "yes, you - er mean the postal service."

OVERHEARD FROM AN ADJOINING ROOM

Bess (in low tones): "Now, Frank, tell me truly, do you or do you not?"

Frank (lower): "If you wouldn't speak quite so loud, perhaps I could explain better."

AN INTERESTING SPECIMEN

Professor (discovering girl using microscope): "Ah! I see you are studying one of those beautiful specimens which are so abundant on our globe!"

Miss Mary W— (who is eagerly looking with greedy eyes at a silver quarter): "Gracious, no! wish they were! I was trying to make this look like fifty cents!"

Reply of Prof—unrecorded.

A young lady going by Dr. Bl—k's house saw the youngest member of the family leaning out of the window, waving his arms wildly and shouting at the top of his voice, "Papa! Papa-a!! Pa-apa-a!!!"

Of course "Papa" must be in sight coming across the Campus—but, no! He is nowhere to be seen. The only man in sight is Mr. Hodges going by the house on his wheel.

Meester Johnn^v Hedman and Dutchies Marquardt and Levine are reported to have petitioned the trustees to establish a course in elementary English, paying especial attention to pronunciation.

QUOTATIONS

Rich (to Miss —, at the door of Ladies' Hall): "I've had a very pleasant evening, but then I always manage to have a good time, no matter where I am."

Miss Warren (on being visited by the committee on statistics for the "Oracle"): "If an engagement be suspected, it is extremely bad taste for any outsider to ask questions."

"It really seemed as if we were one of them, didn't it?"—Mr. Teague's girl was overheard saying to another "brotheress" the morning after the Phi Delt ride.

Acknowledgments

Y^e Oracle is indebted to Mr. Cornish of Augusta for y^e account of y^e life of Mr. Drummond. All othere worke was done by y^e students of y^e College, & y^e editors are glad to take this opportunitie to thanke every one who has in any way aided in preparing this booke. Espetial mention must be made of Mr. Dudley, who was editor of y^e publication until obliged to leave y^e College in April, & who prepared many of y^e statifticks.

Y^e photographic worke was done by Mr. Preble.

Y^e Observer Publishing Co. of Dover, Me., did y^e printing.

Perfection in Printing

is our motto—our aim—our constant goal. You know as well as we, that perfection in printing can only be obtained by the use of the best materials and a close attention to those little things which mark the difference between the ordinary and the nice job, and which are so often overlooked.

¶ It is attention to these details that gives our work its distinctiveness and individuality.

¶ The very highest grade of printing is a specialty with us. We have the experience, the skill and the equipment to produce effective typographic results for all needs.

Excellent board will be furnished for $2.50 per week, payable in advance at the beginning and middle of each term. If the cost of board should exceed $2.50, the expense will be met by the College.

A student with a room-mate can have a room which is heated by steam, lighted by electricity, in a building with modern conveniences, including shower bath, from $18.00 per year upward. The total charges for room-rent, heat, light, service, use of library, gymnasium, board, tuition, and incidental expenses, can be made as low as $198 per year. In case a scholarship is granted, the cost may be reduced from $30 to $50 each year, making the total annual expense $148 to $168.

The New Scientific Course

AT COLBY COLLEGE

It may be interesting to many to learn that a Scientific Course, leading to the degree of Bachelor of Science, begins at Colby College in September, 1903.

The requirements for entrance will be as follows:—

For admission to the course leading to the degree of B. S., twenty-six points are required, distributed as follows:—

REQUIRED SUBJECTS.

College Entrance English,	counts	4 points
Algebra,	“	4 “
Plane Geometry,	“	4 “
Solid Geometry,	“	2 “
Total required,		11 points

OPTIONAL SUBJECTS (15 Points).

(Of these, two years of one modern language, one year of science, and one year of history, must be taken.)

Each year of French,	counts	2 points
Each year of German,	“	2 “
Each year of Latin,	“	2 “
Each year of Greek,	“	2 “
Advanced Mathematics (Higher Algebra and Plane and Spherical Trigonometry),	“	2 “
Physics,	“	2 “
Chemistry,	“	2 “
Physiography,	“	1 point
Physiology,	“	1 “
Roman History,	“	1 “
Greek History,	“	1 “
English History,	“	1 “
American History and Civil Government,	“	1 “

The work in these sciences must include certified note-books, exhibiting the results of experimental work performed by the student.

Henceforth, therefore, Colby College will grant two degrees,—Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Science.
